A source for Boccaccio's Genealogy of Pagan Gods
in an anonymous descriptio of Sicily

In his Genealogy of Pagan Gods, Boccaccio incorporates many materials about pagan myths derived from medieval and pre-humanist compilations and commentaries. One of the most important sources of his Genealogy was a mythographic compendium written by Paolo da Perugia, entitled Collectiones, which did not survive. An anonymous and previously unknown descriptio of Sicily, preserved in only three manuscripts, shares common mythographic excerpts with Boccaccio's Genealogy and it could provide insight about the mythographic works circulating in Naples at the Angevin court of Robert of Anjou during the so-called 'Neapolitan period' of Boccaccio.
